Baby

I'm in a down period I'd admit it. The following will probably appear messy and unorganised.

See, when I say 'my bad, I'm sure' it means that it's probably my fault. Because of who I am.

Being the person I am – outgoing and open and very sensitive to input I find it hard to stay focused on us, because our relationship is so intangible. Being a living organism with needs, tactile and otherwise – a libido, I find it hard to have a girlfriend who cannot give me all that which I need on a daily basis. I've never had a gf on the terms we find ourselves in. I've never had to sustain this kind of pressure before, cause my gf's have always been within reach. I yearn for touching and kissing and holding. Every day.

I meet a lot of people due to my being an actor and I admit that – and this is a common fact, known to many actors – every time I meet new woman I play opposite of – I fall briefly in love – whether it's in a smile, a line, a glance – ever so briefly – but I can't help but wonder... Cause I just love women.

So far nothing's ever happened in situations like that, but it can and may happen. I don't put too much in it, but that doesn't mean it's not there.

Our separation is tough cause it restrains me from things I want. You're not here and nobody knows when we'll see each other again. This has nothing to do with you, but the sheer fact that we're not together and can't be – I can't move and you can't. Even if you could it would be too much of a sacrifice cause who's to say it would ever work out. We hardly know each other. We've spent two wonderful, satisfying weeks together, and I'll treasure them always, but is that enough to start planning overseas immigration? – I think not. And there would be more than trouble if it didn't turn out the way it's supposed to.

I'm trying hard here, but sometimes I think it's to no avail. I'm so sorry.

Now the first thing one would do when reading something like this, would be to try to convince the other person that he's wrong and set it all straight, but think it over before that. I've changed since the days I was really bad, but when we're not together, who knows when I'll slip and give in to the demon? And I don't wanna lie to you. That would be cruel and you don't deserve it.

Love you

Daniel
